Re: MUR 6463 – Second Supplemental Filing of Information Relating to FEC Campaign Finance Violations by Jack Antaramian and Mona Antaramian

Dear Mr. Jordan:

Please accept this letter as a second supplemental addition (the "Second Supplemental Complaint") to the packet of information we provided to you dated March 21, 2011 (the "Complaint") as supplemented by the packet of information we provided to you dated June 14, 2011 (the "Supplemental Complaint") regarding suspected FEC Campaign Finance Violations by Jack J. Antaramian ("Mr. Antaramian"), Mona Antaramian ("Mrs. Antaramian"), and others. Although the Complaint and Supplemental Complaint both dealt specifically with circumstances arising in the 2010 election cycle, we would like to call your attention to certain campaign finance violations that also occurred during the 2008 election cycle.

We have previously provided to you as Exhibit "B" to the Complaint, a copy of a report populated by the FEC entitled "Individual Contributions Arranged by Type, Giver, Then Recipient" for Mr. Antaramian. Additionally, Exhibit "C" to the Complaint provides the same report for Mrs. Antaramian. As you are aware, the 2008 biennial limit for contributions by an individual was set at $108,200.00 (the "Biennial Limit"). Attached as Exhibit "A" to this Second Supplemental Complaint is a copy of a spreadsheet created solely from the contributions listed in Exhibit "B" and Exhibit "C" from the Complaint. This spreadsheet shows that the Biennial Limit was exceeded during the 2008 cycle by both Mr. and Mrs. Antaramian. In fact, the entire Biennial Limit was met and exceeded during the 2008 calendar year alone.

We suspect that the FEC does not have a methodology in place to police all contributors to ensure that excessive contributions violating campaign finance laws are not made. However, we want to call your attention to this matter now, in light of the circumstances surrounding the 2010 election cycle previously reported to you in the Complaint and the Supplemental Complaint.

Although the ultimate determination rests with the FEC on whether Mr. and Mrs. Antaramian have acted knowingly and willfully in trying to sidestep campaign finance laws, the totality of the circumstances surrounding the recurring contributions that began, in large part, in October of 2008 and continued in frequency through December 2008, raises suspicion that Mr. and Mrs. Antaramian were acting intentionally with respect to the numerous contributions shown in Exhibit "A".

Additionally, we call your attention to an unreported in-kind contribution provided by Mr. Antaramian during this 2008 contribution cycle. On October 08, 2008, Joe Biden visited Naples, Florida and made a stop at the Naples Bay Resort during his tour. See Composite Exhibit "B" attached. The Naples Bay Resort is owned, in part, by Mr. Antaramian or entities in which Mr. Antaramian holds ownership interest or control.

The information surrounding this unreported in-kind contribution raises suspicions that Mr. Antaramian acted knowingly in attempting to conceal the contribution from others. As set forth in a Catering Event Order for BEO # 177, the Obama Victory Fund used the Yacht Club Main Dining Room from 3:00PM – 6:00PM on October 8, 2008. A copy of the Catering Event Order for BEO #177 is attached as Exhibit "C". Additionally, a copy of the Club Banquet receipt for BEO #177 totaling $16,711.54 is attached as Exhibit "D". As shown in Exhibit "D", Mr. Antaramian paid for BEO #177 through a Member Charge to his Club Account.

This supplemental information has been provided to you based on facts, information, and belief, and we provide you with the opportunity to investigate the circumstances of these contributions in relation to the information already provided to you, and we hope this information and the attached exhibits prove helpful in your review.

Sincerely,

Iraj J. Zand

DNC Confirms Vice President Biden plans Naples stop for private fund raiser

By Naples Daily News staff report

Originally published 12:15 p.m., January 14, 2010

Updated 06:22 p.m., January 14, 2010

Vice President Joe Biden will visit South Florida this weekend, including a stop in Naples on Sunday for a private fundraiser.

Biden and his wife Jill Biden plan to meet with members of the Haitian-American community on the state's east coast Saturday regarding U.S. response to the crisis in Haiti after this week's earthquake. The Bidens will meet with responders supporting and mobilizing relief efforts in Haiti.

A Secret Service contingent already plans to visit Naples this week and Rikki Boparai, general manager for the Naples Bay Resort, said Wednesday night that the Secret Service has blocked off rooms at the resort in the coming days.

Boparai could not disclose how many rooms have been reserved, or how long those rooms are reserved for.

Naples developer Jack Antaramian, who developed Naples Bay Resort and has hosted fundraisers for President Barack Obama and Biden, could not comment on any upcoming executive branch visits.

In an e-mail to local Democrats Thursday, Jean A Doherty, Director of the Secretary's Office of the Democratic National Committee said Biden will be in Naples Sunday for a private fund raiser.

Biden was in Naples in October 2008, just weeks before the 2008 presidential election. During the October 2008 swing, Biden visited the Naples Bay Resort for a fundraiser hosted by Antaramian.

Democratic VP
candidate Joe Biden
visits SW Florida

1 of 28

NOTE FROM STAFF: We had technical problems with our live video feed from Alico Arena and apologize for not having it online at this time.

7:07 p.m.

Joe Biden ended his speech at Alico Arena with cheers from the crowd.

6:44 p.m.

Debut of a new Democratic zinger?

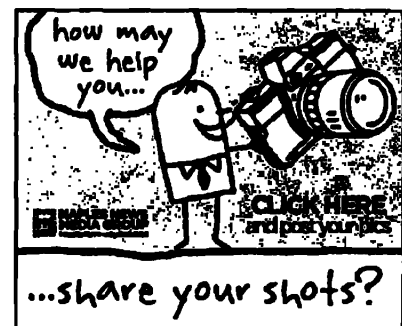

"You can't ever call yourself a maverick if all you've ever been is a sidekick," Biden told the crowd.

He attributes the line to fellow Democratic senator Bob Casey Jr. of Pennsylvania. The crowd eats it up.

6:32 p.m.

Senator Bill Nelson takes the stage. He praises his fellow senators, Biden and Obama. Nelson also notes that both he and Obama are on Biden's Foreign Relations committee in the Senate.

Nelson introduces Biden and someone who's coming on to stage with—Nancy Sauer, a local citizen. The crowd roars as the two come on stage.

Nancy speaks first. She talks about her withering pension, and a home that's long vacant. The past eight years, she said, have not been a good one. This is a common line in the Obama-Biden campaign, that a McCain administration could be similar to a Bush administration.

She then introduces "my hero," Joe Biden.

The crowd goes wild.

6:06 p.m.

Everyone waiting outside got in. The line is gone.

Aronberg warms up the crowd, noting all the young people in attendance and asking for Republicans to stand (a few did, including one lady who waved her hands to the crowd).

He notes the potential lease of Alligator Alley (boos here).

The next speaker is Aaron Myers, a field organizer for the Obama-Biden campaign Fort Myers field office.

5:58 p.m.

Just before the speakers began today, an oft-overlooked member of the tonight's production sat on a carpeted square cube, waiting to begin her work. Christine J. DiBenedetto is a nationally-certified sign language interpreter. She'll be doing the interpreting for all of the night's speakers, including Biden. In fact, the last political event she worked was a community forum Biden held in Fort Myers in September.

"No deaf person came," she quickly noted.

"I don't know why it is," she continued. If (deaf people) feel like (the events) don't have the interpreter or if they're not informed," she said.

The events never advertise they'll have an interpreter, she said, and during Biden's September forum, broadcasters caught her in their cameras only twice.

And when she's not working a political event?

"I do weddings, I do funerals."

With that, the lights came on, the first speaker came out and DiBenedetto climbed on top of the cube to begin her job.

5:56 p.m.

Our first speakers are a Lutheran pastor, a Vietnam veteran and State Sen. David Aronberg. This crowd is riled up, chanting "USA" and "Yes, we can!"

Aronberg: "Welcome to what may be the largest political rally ever for a Democrat in Lee County."

The crowd erupts.

5:33 p.m.

We're minutes away from the first speaker here at Alico Arena, and the line outside still stretches to the tennis courts. The capacity of the Arena is normally 4,500, but it's unclear how many people will be allowed into the arena and whether anyone will have to wait outside. One arena worker I spoke to said she thought capacity is 3,800, but that probably doesn't include the floor seating. Also, some of the lower bleachers aren't being used, to make room for the floor seating.

5:20 p.m.

Sen. Joe Biden is on his way to Alico Arena after leaving a private fundraiser at the Naples Bay Resort.

Biden waved to the small crowd that gathered to see him outside the resort and got on the bus.

He is expected to take the stage at Alico by 7 p.m.

5:08 p.m.

It's a family event here in Alico Arena. Marilyn Campbell, 30, has her full brood in tow for their first chance to see the vice presidential candidate. She has seven young children--six girls and a boy.

The girls -- Cordaysia, 9-years-old; Cornesha, 9; Cordalia, 8; Corneita, 7; Courtney, 6; and Corshayla, 4 -- all wear pink shirts and sport red and white braids. They're a little shy, especially when asked by a reporter what Barack Obama looks like. Marilyn's mother, Estella Griffin, whispers a hint: "He's tall and good-looking."

As for the boy, 17-month-old Marlon, his mother says he's used to watching politicians.

"That's the only time he'll watch TV, when (Estella) is watching CNN and MSNBC," Campbell said.

Another future politician, it seems.

Does Obama's candidacy have any special meaning for this black family from Fort Myers? Not so much, Griffin said.

"It's just the change we need," she said. "If Hillary had won, I'd support her."

4:52 p.m.

The wave has just broken out in Alico Arena. Now the crowd's fired up. The arena is about two-thirds full and everyone is stamping their feet and chanting.

"Drill, baby, drill?"

Nope. It's "Yes, we can."

4:51 p.m.

Alico Arena is gradually filling up. A line extends beyond the front doors and along the campus tennis courts. Volunteers are looking for two types of tickets, the yellow VIP tickets (those put you on the floor) and the blue general admission tickets.

The heat outside is oppressive, and everyone's getting a double-dose: First at Germain and then at Alico.

Bill Violette, a 14-year-old freshman at Cypress Lake High School seems to be faring well, despite wearing a wool blazer, button-up shirt and tie.

"I heard it was going to a formal event," he cracked.

An aspiring politician, Violette has already cast his lot with the Obama-Biden campaign. He's been working the phone banks in the Fort Myers Democratic Party headquarters, and he's done some voter registrations at grocery store. This is his first opportunity to see any candidate in person, and he said he'd like to hear Biden speak about the economy.

Now, if only he could vote.

He'll wait until 2012 for that right. And he's hoping the vote will be to re-elect President Obama. He's also considering his own political fortunes. Could a run for class president be in the cards?

"I ought to," he said, straightening up. "I think I will."

4:30 p.m.

The sounds of John Mellencamp's "Our Country" plays over the loud speaker as the audience begins to trickle in. The line outside Alico arena stretches for blocks, past the tennis courts to the north to Cypress Hall.

Allen Park Elementary School Fifth-grader Annie Filkowski, wearing a Kiwi for Obama button, stood in line with her dad and brother. When asked why she likes Obama and Biden, Annie said the candidates don't "like just the wealthy like McCain."

Joe Filkowski said he is anxious to hear Biden speak about how the Democrats would improve the economy.

"I am in construction and every day is worse and worse," he said. "It's everything. And I believe Biden will open some doors that might have been closed to Barack."

Filkowski said he also likes that Obama has young children and would understand the economic plight facing young working families.

Will Filkowski can't vote, but that does not stop him from being an ardent supporter and volunteer for the Obama/Biden campaign. Will has registered voters and done phone banking.

"We need to end the policies of George W. Bush," he said. "We need to end the war in Iraq."

Estero resident Jennifer Gabou had been waiting in line for about an hour as she moved into the final stretch of the line into the Biden event. Gabou, an undecided voter, said she hoped to make up her mind about who her candidate would be by the end of the event.

"I am excited about the possibility of change," she said. "I am more excited about seeing Biden today than I was about meeting George W. Bush in the White House."

Gabou, who met Bush after Florida Gulf Coast University won a tennis championship for the team she coaches, said she was looking to hear how the economic policies of the Obama/Biden campaign were going to affect her.

"I want to know what someone in my economic situation can expect," she said.

4:20 p.m.

Deborah Ryan and her son Colton Bailey, 9, from Naples snapped photos as Joe Biden got off his bus at Naples Bay Resort.

"We did see him," Colton said. "We saw the back of his head."

The fleeting glance was enough for Ryan.

"It's part of history," she said. "We're anxious for change. I think everyone is at this point."

4:10 p.m.

Germain Arena's parking lot is about one-quarter full. The rear parking lot is filled. A steady stream of cars continue to arrive in the lot.

Buses continue to transport people to Alico, non-stop.

4:07 p.m.

Biden pulled into the Naples Bay Resort, here he is expected to speak at a private fundraiser. He arrived in a black bus. He has a large motorcade with a Florida Highway Patrol, Naples police and Collier County Sheriff escort.

4 p.m.

Collier County sheriff's deputies arrive at intersection of Golden Gate Parkway and Goodlette-Frank Road in Naples. They have stopped north, south and eastbound traffic. The only traffic allowed through is westbound on the parkway. Traffic starts to back up.

Police on motorcycles arrive ahead of motorcade at intersection, heading south on Goodlette-Frank.

Traffic is reopened in the three directions six minutes later, after last motorcade vehicle clears the intersection.

3:27 p.m.

At least six buses have loaded for the trip to Alico Arena, but the line is still long, maybe even longer than before the shuttles started loading.

It's a good crowd for making a buck, especially when you're selling Obama-Biden buttons, as is 81-year-old Joe Dougan, a retired carpenter. He's dressed in an Obama-Biden 2008 T-shirt and a blue-speckled white baseball cap pinned with buttons all the way around. He carries his merchandise on a wooden board. There's the "Barack to the Future" button, stylized like the Michael J. Fox movie with a similar name. Then there's "Obama says knock you out," with a picture of the candidate, made to appear shirtless, jabbing a fist at the viewer. Written on the knuckles: H-O-P-E.

Monday's Palin rally was the first time he sold buttons. His son gave him the board, upon hearing the candidates were coming down. Dougan said he's learning from the other merchandisers, although he does things a little different.

"I'm not one for yelling out," he said.

Which ticket will he vote for in November?

"I'm a Democrat, but I don't know," he said. Looks like I'm going to go Republican."

And with that, Dougan was off to sell more Obama buttons.

3:15 p.m.

The doors open to Alico Arena, offering relief from the heat for hundreds eager to see Biden. Paramedics have tended to at least two senior citizens, apparently because of the heat.

Water is available at a cost: $2 a bottle. At the rally Monday for Gov. Sarah Palin at Germain Arena, water was offered for free while others did sell bottled water for a price.

A few are selling

There are a few people outside are selling buttons, pins, T-shirts and bumper stickers. "Hot chicks for Obama" read one T-shirt.

Someone in the crowd quipped, "I always liked Joe Biden. He's missing that switch between his brain and his mouth."

3:05 p.m.

Just before 3 p.m. 20-year-old Filip Blaze, of Naples, was standing on the bridge next to the Naples Bay Resort, where Biden is expected to speak at a private fundraiser.

Blaze was on the property earlier this afternoon attempting to talk to a restaurant manager about a job interview. He was approached by Naples police officers who asked him his name and what he was doing there.

"They told me to get off the property," Blaze said. "I asked what was going on, if there was a private, secret CIA meeting or something."

Blaze, who is a resident of Switzerland, planned to stick around to catch a glimpse of Biden -- even though he didn't know who Biden was -- because he said he had nothing else to do.

"I can't vote, but I hope Obama gets elected," Blaze said.

2:59 p.m.

Tired of the buzzwords surrounding this election? Sick of hearing the words 'Change,' 'Maverick' or 'Main Street?' Talk to former Bonita Springs councilman Alex Grantt. He's standing in line for the Biden speech, and he has a different word he'd like to hear Biden say today: "Amtrak."

Dressed in a button up shirt, black suspenders and a blue tie with an Amtrak tie clip, Grantt explains why Southwest Florida needs the passenger rail service and how an Obama-Biden administration would help. Biden, after all, is a big commuter on Amtrak, riding from his Delaware home to the Capitol when Congress is in session.

"People are going to start screaming bloody murder when gas prices go up to $5 and they're going to start thinking of passenger rail," Grantt said.

The Lee County commission and Fort Myers city council have already passed resolutions asking for Amtrak lines to be extended south to the region. Now, Grantt said, they just need an "inside line" to the White House.

But does he really expect the longtime senator to speak about Amtrak today? Not likely, Grantt said.

2:52 p.m.

At three months old, Gregory Alspaugh may be the youngest Biden supporter at Alico Arena. His mother, Amanda Cornell, of Cape Coral, got Gregory a custom-made onesie that reads "I need a change Obama/Biden 08."

"I thought it was a wonderful story for him," she said.

Another Cape Coral mom, Pomika Breese, brought her 1-year-old Isaac and 4-year-old Gabriella to the event.

Breese was wearing a baby carrier that she made herself from a campaign T-shirt. Though her children are young, she said Gabriella has shown a lot of interest in the campaign.

"I just feel it's a moment in history," she said.

2:45 p.m.

It looks like the extreme heat outside Alico has already claimed its first victim. Paramedics had to take someone away on a stretcher. The line to get into the event is now several blocks long.

2:30 p.m.

It's 2:30 p.m. and the first shuttles from Germain Arena to Alico Arena are now loading. The line of speech attendees stretches down the parking lot and near the side of the arena closest to the Interstate. At the front of the line, Fort Myers insurance agent Danielli Austin, 32, and her daughter, Julia Berthelette, have been waiting about an hour for the shuttles. Austin closed shop for the day and pulled Julia out of school for the event. Why were they there?

"The button says it all," explained Julia, motioning to the large "Obama-Biden 2008" button appended to her chest.

The atmosphere and crowd at Germain isn't the same as the Palin campaign, but those waiting in line seem fine with that.

Austin attended Monday's Palin rally, she said, and wasn't impressed. But she made up her mind long ago. Palin's speech was "canned," Austin said.

But wouldn't Biden deliver his stump speech, too?

Maybe, said an excited 72-year-old Ferdinand Werner, standing behind Austin. But "When Biden speaks, he speaks the truth!"

1:51 p.m.

So far, one protester has set up in a special staging area that FGCU officials have set aside for demonstrators. The staging area is about ½ mile from Alico Arena about 50 yards off the main road circling the campus. Betsy Ross, of Naples, has a McCain/ Palin yard sign out and a yellow sign that reads "Obama Hangs with Terrorists." She also has a sign that reads "Biden a fool and a liar and one heartbeat away."

Ross said campus police made her set up in the staging area because the university has a policy about protests within a certain distance from an event.

Ross said she was a little surprised that FGCU had a staging area for protesters.

"It was kind of bizarre actually," she said. "It leads to nowhere and no discussion."

The crowd at Alico Arena, where Democratic vice-presidential candidate Sen. Joe Biden is expected to speak in a few hours, has grown to about 100 people. Members of the AARP are handing out fans so people can stay cool in the extreme heat. Others are huddling under the minimal shade from a few palm trees.

Don Cooley, of Cape Coral, is one of the first people in line. He's a registered Republican but said he will be voting for Barack Obama and Joe Biden. He said he remained undecided for a while but decided on Obama a couple weeks ago when McCain suspended his campaign to work on the economic crisis. Cooley said he thought it was a political stunt. Cooley said he's also upset with McCain's choice of Alaska Gov. Sara Palin for vice president.

Across town at the Naples Bay Resort, where a private fundraiser for Biden is expected to get underway shortly, the area is free from protestors and supporters.

1:10 p.m.

Florida Gulf Coast University, where Democratic vice-presidential candidate Sen. Joseph Biden will speak today, issued instructions about public parking for the event at Alico Arena. People attending the event must park at Germain Arena, where a shuttle service will be available.

On campus parking is for handicap persons and event staff only, according to officials. Due to classes being in session, only vehicles with FGCU parking decals are allowed to park on campus.

There are signs on FGCU campus and Ben Hill Griffin Parkway directing drivers to park at Germain Arena. Once in Germain parking lot, staff is directing vehicles to the rear of the building to park. About 50 cars are parked at Germain Arena so far.

Democratic vice-presidential candidate Joe Biden will be speaking at a political rally at 5:30 p.m. today at Alico Arena. The arena, which is on the Florida Gulf Coast University campus, holds about 4,500 people.

The rally is part of Biden's swing through Southwest Florida and comes two days after Gov. Sarah Palin, the Republican pick for vice president, fired up a crowd of close to 9,000 people at Germain Arena.

Biden will also attend a Naples fundraiser hosted by developer Jack Antaramian.

Sarah Palin's husband Todd was a registered member of the Alaska Independence Part (not to be confused with the Independent Party) until as recently as 2002.

The Alaska Independence Party (AIP) is a political party in Alaska that would like Alaska to secede from the United States of America and become their own country.

AIP was founded by a man named Joe Vogler.
Vogler once said, "The fires of Hell are frozen glaciers compared to my hatred for the American government and I won't be trusted under their blessed flag."

Exhibit "B-2"

Page 9 of 18

Vogler also said "I'm an Alaskan, not an American. I've got no use for America or her blasted institutions."

This man had an obvious hatred for America, and Todd Palin was one of his followers.

By the way, when I say reputable source I am not speaking about the website that you put together. That's quoting yourself. I mean, a respected expert, a member of the same political party refuting their candidates claim (see Bill Clinton and Chris Dodd), or even main stream media (preferably one without a political bias. It's DISGUSTING!

Barack Hussien Obama is going win the election over John McCain, a man that also gave up classified information to the Viet Cong when he was a POW.

Some POWs did that, some didn't John McCain GTD!

John McCain during his acceptance speech: "And they (the Viet Cong) broke me. When they brought me back to my cell, I was hurt and ashamed, and I didn't know how I could face my fellow prisoners."

President Barack Hussein Obama '08!
Get used to it.

Today's Gallup Poll:
Obama - 52%
McCain - 41%

The American People don't want John McCain to change the subject from the economy to smear tactics. Another McCain stunt BACKFIRED!

One can only watch the real McCain strut will be as he desperately tries to win his final shot at the presidency.

John McCain will obviously say and do anything to win this election.

I'll respond to it. By the way, I'm an independent. First, you give Michelle Obama's full quote and then abbreviate McCain's to suit your purpose. He also, in that same quote made mention that it took a situation where they took away his rights and liberties to full understand those same rights and liberties.

As to the rest of it. These are not new revelations. He has admitted and taken responsibility for his action. Something Obama does not do!

- I know how to find Bin Laden.
- I know how to fix the global financial crisis.
- I know how to fix social security. In fact, this one is very easy.
- Health care? Easy as handing the ball off to a running back.
- The wars in Iraq and Afghanistan? I know how to fix them as well.

My friends, I know how to fix all of our nation's problems but I haven't because I'm waiting until I become President to do so. Why? Because as you all know, I put country first.

John McCain is full of hate. Have you read the cover story in this month's Rolling Stone magazine? Read it. He is a disgusting pig and has been a disgusting pig his entire life. He didn't even know many planes he crashed. He isn't a navigator. He is a spoiled brat, just like "W" who only wanted to impress his father. He left the scene of many of plane crash while others were injured, just so he could find some bimbo to sleep with...even though he was married. He cheated on his first wife so many times it's not funny. The man is a PIG (without lipstick). And if he becomes our president, the entire country will be man into the ground. Inflation is growing at fastest rate in 20 years.
US Stocks more full by more than 3000 point this year.
Unemployment at 6.1%
776,000 American Jobs Lost in 2008
More than 9,000 homes are being foreclosed on in America EVERY month this year!
Wages are down in the United States!
Greenspan: "America Can't Afford McCain's Tax Plan"

Remember, we didn't rake up a $9.5 trillion national debt or a debt of $1.8 trillion to China in the past 19 months, and just in case anybody forgets.

George Bush had utilized his veto powers in his first 6 years of office only one time. During that 6 year period the Senate and Congress were made up of a Republican majority.

Bush has utilized his veto powers 11 times in the past 19 months. In those 19 months the Senate and Congress had a small Democrat majority, making impossible to over-ride a veto without Republican support. It requires 2/3 of a majority to over-ride a presidential veto.

This has made it very difficult (or virtually impossible) for the Democrats to repair in 18 months what it took the Republicans 6 years to break.

Now the McCain campaign says they know longer want to discuss the economy because doing so will cost them the election. IMAGINE THAT!

Senator McCain actually lost FIVE aircraft during his career:

AC #1 happened in 1928 while practicing landings in Corpus Christi Bay (Texas). The investigation board determined the crash was caused by a mechanical failure, not by pilot error. (Not his fault.)

AC #2 happened in the Mediterranean, where he clipped some powerlines while flying low over the ground. The investigation board determined that the crash was caused by pilot error. (His fault.)

AC #3 happened following a flyover at the Army-Navy football game. The plane's single jet engine flamed-out and he was forced to eject after completing all necessary in-flight engine restart procedures. The investigation board determined that the crash was by a mechanical failure, not by pilot error. (Not his fault.)

AC #4 happened in 1967 on the flight deck of the USS Forrestal. He was sitting in the cockpit of his plane waiting to take off when a rocket accidentally fired from another plane slammed into his aircraft. He escaped from the aircraft, but the resulting explosion and fire killed 134 sailors and destroyed 20 aircraft. The investigation board ruled that there was nothing he could have done to avoid being hit by the rocket. (Not his fault.)

AC #5 happened in 1967 while flying his 23rd mission over North Vietnam when his plane was hit by an enemy surface-to-air missile. He ejected from the plane, breaking both arms and one leg in the process, and was captured by the North Vietnamese after he parachuted into Truc Bach Lake near Hanoi. The investigation board ruled that there was no contributory pilot error in the loss of the aircraft. (Not his fault.)

It kinda loses its "punch" when you actually put it into context, though, doesn't it?

Thank you for playing. Please try again.
